CERTIFICATE OF INDEPENDENT BID DETERMINATION

1. This Standard Bidding Document (SBD) must form part of all bids¹ invited.

2. Section 4 (1) (b) (iii) of the Competition Act No. 89 of 1998, as amended, prohibits an agreement between, or concerted practice by, firms, or a decision by an association of firms, if it is between parties in a horizontal relationship and if it involves collusive bidding (or bid rigging).² Collusive bidding is a pe se prohibition meaning that it cannot be justified under any grounds.

3. Treasury Regulation 16A9 prescribes that accounting officers and accounting authorities must take all reasonable steps to prevent abuse of the supply chain management system and authorizes accounting officers and accounting authorities to:
   a. disregard the bid of any bidder if that bidder, or any of its directors have abused the institution’s supply chain management system and or committed fraud or any other improper conduct in relation to such system.
   b. cancel a contract awarded to a supplier of goods and services if the supplier committed any corrupt or fraudulent act during the bidding process or the execution of that contract.

4. This SBD serves as a certificate of declaration that would be used by institutions to ensure that, when bids are considered, reasonable steps are taken to prevent any form of bid-rigging.

5. In order to give effect to the above, the attached Certificate of Bid Determination (SBD 9) must be completed and submitted with the bid:

² Bid rigging (or collusive bidding) occurs when businesses, that would otherwise be expected to compete, secretly conspire to raise prices or lower the quality of goods and / or services for purchasers who wish to acquire goods and / or services through a bidding process. Bid rigging is, therefore, an agreement between competitors not to compete.
CERTIFICATE OF INDEPENDENT BID DETERMINATION

9. The terms of the accompanying bid have not been, and will not be, disclosed by the bidder, directly or indirectly, to any competitor, prior to the date and time of the official bid opening or of the awarding of the contract.

³ Joint venture or Consortium means an association of persons for the purpose of combining their expertise, property, capital, efforts, skill and knowledge in an activity for the execution of a contract.

1. PURPOSE

This document provides the terms of reference for the appointment of a service provider to revise guidelines for the administration of incidents as contemplated in Section 30 of National Environmental Management Act (NEMA) as amended.

2. INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

2.1 Section 30 of the National Environmental Management Act, 1998 (Act No. 107 of 1998), as amended, provides for the management of incidents for which the Minister of Environmental Affairs and MECs for Provincial Environmental Departments are the competent authority for the control and management of Environmental Incidents (EIs). Within the Department of Environmental Affairs, the Chief Directorate: Compliance (CD:C) is primarily responsible for the implementation of this function. Hence, the Chief Directorate: Compliance is leading a process that will carry out this function and ensuring that there are guidelines available to be applied throughout the country in order to maintain consistency in the implementation of the legislation. This initiative is also in line with the implementation of the commitments made in the National Environmental Compliance and Enforcement Strategy (NECES) adopted by Environmental Management Inspectors (EMI) institutions. Incidents are viewed as environmental, health and safety hazards, respectively. Hence, the need for these incidents to be properly managed and controlled.

2.2 The Control of Emergency Incidents has been seen in the past as being unclearly defined by NEMA Section 30 and not legally enforceable. The National Environmental Laws Amendment Act of 2013 (NEMLA 2) has now included amendments of the definition to NEMA Section 30 as “control of incidents”, which necessitates the amendment of existing guidelines to be in line with the new definitions in the law. These existing guidelines need to be revised and used for the administration of incidents as contemplated in Section 30 of National Environmental Management Act (NEMA) as amended. This will include the revision and updating of existing guidelines’ list of chemicals, refine thresholds or reportable quantities of hazardous substances released in the environment and determine the magnitude and type of fires and explosions to be reported to this department.

One of the challenges encountered during the implementation of the guidelines was quantifying of the hazardous substances and this posed a serious problem for the Environmental Management Inspectors (EMIs). Amongst the list of chemicals annexed, did not have appropriate units or indicate the risk associated that may cause significant harm to the environment, human life or property. It is important that these substances are measured correctly in order to provide the correct information regarding the extent of the damage that might be caused by these substances.

2.3 The old NEMA Section 30 (1) (a) was as follows:

An incident means an unexpected sudden occurrence, including major emission, fire or explosion leading to serious danger to the public or potentially serious pollution of a detriment to the environment whether immediate or delayed.

The new NEMA section 30 is as follows:

An incident means an unexpected, sudden and uncontrolled release of hazardous substance; including from major emission, fire or explosion, that causes, has caused or may cause significant harm to the environment, human life or property. In terms of the new definition the word emergency was deleted from provision of section 30 and inclusion of uncontrolled release of hazardous substance.

These amendments have significant impact on the existing guidelines as they were based on the previous definitions. For, instance, the thresholds were focused on major emission, fire or explosion rather than hazardous chemicals released including from major emission, fire or explosion. For rivers and streams, an incident with potentially serious pollution or detriment to the environment threshold was as follows:
“Any fire, explosion or emission covering an area exceeding 10 square metres within the one in ten year flood line of a river or stream, or within 32 metres of the bank of a river or stream where the flood line is unknown”.

It is therefore crucial to revise these existing guidelines accordingly. Below is the table highlighting the key areas of improvement in the existing guidelines and what is being envisaged in the revised version. However, the revision in not only limited to the areas listed in the table below as there is a dire need to improve the entire guideline document.

2.4 Hazardous substances/chemicals spillages are amongst the most overwhelming environmental incidents that can occur because it affects people, animals, the land, water resources and the coastal waters ways. They can either kill wildlife, destroy habitats or contaminate critical resources in the environment.

Most oil and chemical spill incidents are commonly caused by accidents involving tankers, pipelines, barges, refineries, storage facilities, small ship collisions and fuel transfer mishaps. Hazardous materials come in different forms, including explosives, flammable and combustible substances, poisons, and radioactive materials.

These substances are most often released as a result of transportation accidents or because of chemical accidents in manufacturing plants or refineries.

Other causes of oil and chemical spill incidents are:

- people making mistakes/omissions during the process or being careless
- equipment breaking down
- natural disasters such as hurricanes
- deliberate acts like vandalism or illegal dumpers

2.5 By their nature, the manufacture, storage and transport of chemicals, accidental spills or releases are likely to happen. These spills and accidents range from small to large and can occur anywhere chemicals are found. Chemicals can be corrosive, toxic, and they may react, often explosively. The impacts of chemical accidents can be deadly, for both human beings and the environment. They can also cause destruction on the economies.

2.6 The major chemical accidents seem most threatening because they often kill people absolute, it is also the smaller more routine accidents and spills that affect most people. Some of the most common spills involve tanker trucks and railroad tankers containing gasoline, chlorine, acid, or other industrial chemicals. However, it is not always the case as some accidental spillages with minor hazardous chemicals can cause major fatalities. For instance,
- A bottle containing 25 ml of Formaldehyde fell and broke in the warehouse, where one of the employees poured water onto the chemical which caused fumes resulting in most employees inhaling the fumes and two of them fainted while the rest were able to evacuate the building;

- There was an accident in Potchefstroom from a spontaneous failure of a pressure vessel containing a hazardous chemical. This resulted in the release of 38 tonnes of liquefied ammonia and a total of eighteen people were killed, both on and off the site.

- In India at the pesticide plant, a leak caused by a series of mechanical and human failures, released a cloud of lethal methyl isocyanate over the city in which resulted in about two thousand immediate fatalities and another eight thousand who died later.

- In another incident which occurred in 1988, six firemen were killed minutes after arriving at the scene of two burning pick-up trucks in Missouri, when more than 13 000 kilograms of ammonium nitrate stored in a nearby trailer exploded. This incident led to the formation of the hazardous materials division in their Fire Department, specializing in hazardous materials handling.

2.7 One of the most common concerns over chemical accidents and hazardous materials spills is acute, or short-term toxicity. Acutely toxic contaminants, such as cyanide and chlorine released from hazardous materials spills, pose an immediate threat to public health. For example, a chemical accident in which chlorine gas or cyanide gas is released would likely result in widespread deaths as the plume, or toxic cloud, moved through a populated area. Another class of toxicity is chronic, or long term illness. One of the most common types of chronic toxicity is exposure to carcinogens that may result in cancer twenty to thirty years after the time of the spill.

2.8 Another very different effect of chemical spills and accidents is ecotoxicity, a toxic effect on the environment rather than on human health. The most intense ecotoxicity resulting from chemical spills results from petroleum spills at sea or in rivers or lakes. When such a catastrophe occurs, the toxicity often depends on the type of petroleum. The most common material spill, crude oil, contains some toxic chemicals that dissolve in the water. Most of the petroleum, however, floats on surface water. It usually causes environmental damage by coating the feathers of birds and the gills of fish, physically disrupting their movements and their ability to breathe. Oil washed ashore also disrupts marine life in fragile areas.

2.9 Based on the above, it is also crucial to rank and classify incidents per magnitude and associated risks (whether the incident is a major or minor, high or low risk to the receiving environment, etc.). These includes reportable quantities and thresholds as indicated earlier.

2.10 Departmental officials involved in incidents are only responsible for ensuring that the responsible companies for the spillages are assessing the risk of hazardous material released and its effects on the people, environment and property. These includes assessing whether the concentrations of the chemicals are evaluated, the effects on the environment, human life and property as well as the containment of the spillage and clean-up conducted.

2.11 Currently, all incidents are reported to DEA, regardless of the different mandated government departments, whether minor or major and these results in the departmental officials responding to incidents which are not necessarily under their jurisdiction.

2.12 The revision of these guidelines will assist in improving efficiency and effectiveness in the control of incidents.

3. OBJECTIVES

The overall objective of this project is:

- For an external service provider to revise guidelines which will be used for the administration of incidents as contemplated in Section 30 of National Environmental Management Act (NEMA) as amended. This will include updating of existing guidelines’ list of chemicals, refine thresholds or reportable quantities of hazardous substances released in the environment and determine the magnitude and type of fires and explosions to be reported to this department. These will involve the use of sophisticated/specific scientific models like Mathematical and Physical Consequence Modelling, Human Health and Ecological Risk Assessment, both Quantitative and Qualitative Risk Assessments to come up with thresholds or reportable quantities of hazardous substances released in the environment that causes or may cause significant harm to the environment, human life or property. The service provider must also conduct assessment of safety risks associated with hazardous chemicals in order to classify the related incidents.

4. SCOPE AND EXTENT OF WORK

The service provider will be tasked:

- To revise existing guidelines for the administration of incidents as contemplated in Section 30 of National Environmental Management Act (NEMA), including:

  o To develop a set of scientifically sound and legally defensible criteria for the selection of appropriate and reportable incidents as defined in S30 of NEMA as amended.

With respect to the above, the following aspects must, be covered:

- A matrix that includes thresholds/quantities, appropriate units, exposure limits, hazard rating, duration, sensitivity of the receiving environment etc.; and an explanation of the rating system for each of these aspects

- Revised definitions of key terms, such as “unexpected, sudden, uncontrolled” release; and “significant” harm.

- Classification of incidents in terms of magnitude and associated risks to the receiving environment.
o To conduct extensive stakeholder engagements in order to ensure that there is alignment with other authorities or stakeholder statutory requirements;

o Conduct a two day workshop on draft revised guidelines with internal and external stakeholders with a view to solicit comments on the guideline;

o Refine and finalise the revised guidelines.

- Development of a project closure report for DEA; and
- Skills Transfer to DEA staff and provincial S30 incident focal points (2 training sessions and accompanying manuals on the use of guidelines).

Note that Logistical arrangements (venue, catering) for stakeholder engagements/training will be at DEA expense.

5. EXPECTED OUTCOMES

DEA and the Service Provider will discuss and agree upon a detailed work-plan for the project, setting out the details of the relevant activities, deliverables and timeframes required for the project, however, the following basic activities/deliverables must be included:
