CERTIFICATE OF INDEPENDENT BID DETERMINATION

1 This Standard Bidding Document (SBD) must form part of all bids¹ invited.

2 Section 4 (1) (b) (iii) of the Competition Act No. 89 of 1998, as amended, prohibits an agreement between, or concerted practice by, firms, or a decision by an association of firms, if it is between parties in a horizontal relationship and if it involves collusive bidding (or bid rigging).² Collusive bidding is a pe se prohibition meaning that it cannot be justified under any grounds.

3 Treasury Regulation 16A9 prescribes that accounting officers and accounting authorities must take all reasonable steps to prevent abuse of the supply chain management system and authorizes accounting officers and accounting authorities to:

   a. disregard the bid of any bidder if that bidder, or any of its directors have abused the institution’s supply chain management system and or committed fraud or any other improper conduct in relation to such system.

   b. cancel a contract awarded to a supplier of goods and services if the supplier committed any corrupt or fraudulent act during the bidding process or the execution of that contract.

4 This SBD serves as a certificate of declaration that would be used by institutions to ensure that, when bids are considered, reasonable steps are taken to prevent any form of bid-rigging.

5 In order to give effect to the above, the attached Certificate of Bid Determination (SBD 9) must be completed and submitted with the bid:

² Bid rigging (or collusive bidding) occurs when businesses, that would otherwise be expected to compete, secretly conspire to raise prices or lower the quality of goods and / or services for purchasers who wish to acquire goods and / or services through a bidding process. Bid rigging is, therefore, an agreement between competitors not to compete.

TERMS OF REFERENCE

For the appointment of a service provider to facilitate a process of national dialogue through a series of workshops relating to the intensive and selective breeding of color variants (e.g. black impala, golden gnu)

12. Evaluation criteria
1. PURPOSE
   To appoint a service provider to facilitate six (6) workshops in a process of national dialogue on the intensive and selective breeding of color variants, and to compile reports on the emerging deliberations, namely:
   - A report reflecting the key issues emanating from each of the respective workshops (i.e. six reports);
   - A consolidated report, reflecting a summary of the issues emanating from each of the workshops, with recommendations made on the way forward; and
   - A summary report for distribution to industry stakeholders.

2. INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND
   From a scientific perspective, the intensive and selective breeding of color variants raise concerns regarding the risks, among others, to the loss of genetic diversity associated with intensive and selective breeding of color variants. Generally the risks associated with intensive and selective breeding practices have been categorised as:
   - Inbreeding/ outbreeding depression
   - Hybridisation
   - Animal welfare
   - Domestication/loss of genetic fitness of introduced populations
   - Predator control and secondary ecosystem-level impacts thereof
   - Development of resistant strains of parasites
   - Habitat loss and fragmentation associated with a change from extensive to intensive wildlife systems
   - Reputational damage to the hunting and tourism industry of South Africa
   - Socio-economic risk if investors/communities lose money invested in what may be shown to be a pyramid scheme
   - Increased regulatory and management costs to the state, including redirecting limited resources from other important activities to benefit the activities of a few.

   The Scientific Authority of South Africa indicated in 2010 that the threat posed by the selective and intensive breeding of color variants, caused by recessive genes, will depend on the size, genetic make-up (diversity) and viability of the population receiving these colour morphs.
   Although relatively small populations or threatened taxa could be more at risk, it was unlikely that animals selectively bred for the expression of a rare coat color would have any significant effect on a large natural population should they escape, as the recessive genes would have little effect in an overwhelmingly genetically diverse population. The Scientific Authority therefore recommended that:
   (a) Selective breeding for rare colour morphs should be discouraged or disincentivised as an undesirable practice and game farmers who wish to manage their farms and animals using sound ecological principals, should be incentivized;
   (b) The risk associated with the selective and intensive breeding of colour variants should be monitored and evaluated (rather than regulated). Therefore:
       (i) All breeders should register with the Department of Environmental Affairs (DEA);
       (ii) Breeders should report annually on the number of animals being released from breeding facilities each year, as well as the destination of those animals; and (iii) DEA should report on the number of color variants of each species being released in each province, relative to the total population of normal color animals in the province.
   (c) The Scientific Authority, in conjunction with DEA, should decide on and agree to a threshold to initiate stricter regulation. The DEA developed a reporting template and requested industry to provide information on the facilities that breed color variants (if preferred to do so, owners of the breeding facilities could submit anonymous reports). However, this reporting was voluntary and as a result, the feedback was limited.

However, game farmers who are involved in these breeding practices have argued that this practice is acceptable considering its economic value to the game farming and trophy hunting industries, and also considering that colour variants is a natural phenomenon in nature.

In spite of past extensive discussions on the intensive and selective breeding of color variants, the matter is proving to be an exceedingly complex issue, which, combined with the lack of sufficient scientific information, makes clear policy statements on risks associated therewith, extremely difficult.

Considering both the scientific concerns and the economic value relating to the intensive and selective breeding of colour variants, the Minister of Environmental Affairs has requested the DEA to facilitate a process of national dialogue on this matter. The strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats associated with intensive and selective breeding practices will be unpacked during a series of six workshops, involving two main groups, namely:

- Game farmers, game breeders and economists; and
- Scientists, NGOs and conservation authorities.

3. OBJECTIVES OF THE PROPOSAL

   - Projected time frames for submission of draft reports;
4.3 Attend an inception meeting to be briefed on the issues (date to be announced);
4.4 Facilitate and manage discussions during the following six workshops:
   - Inception workshop in Pretoria (date to be announced);
   - Two (2) workshops in Pretoria (dates to be announced);
   - Two workshops in Cape Town (dates to be announced); and

- A report reflecting the key issues emanating from each of the respective workshops (i.e. six reports);
