1. PURPOSE
To appoint a service provider to conduct a study on the environmental impacts of herbicide tolerant (HT) genetically modified organisms (GMOs) and associated herbicides, and provide recommendations to the Department of Environmental, Forestry and Fisheries to support environmental risk assessment (ERA) procedures and decision making for HT GMOs and associated herbicide usage for a period of twelve (12) months.

2. INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND
2.1 Herbicide tolerance (HT) is one of the traits that has been introduced in the genetically modified (GM) maize, cotton and soybean commercially produced in South Africa (SA). The introduction of this trait has been made possible through the application of recombinant deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) technology to alter the genetic makeup of these crops by inserting foreign genes from organisms with naturally occurring tolerance to the herbicides. While the GM soybean currently produced in SA only has the herbicide tolerance trait, the GM maize and cotton also have the insect resistance trait, either as a single trait, or in combination with the HT trait (stacked traits).

2.2 In terms of herbicide tolerance, currently, all three GM crops express tolerance to herbicides containing glyphosate, while maize also has varieties tolerant to herbicides containing glufosinate ammonium. Also in the pipeline are other forms of these crops with tolerance to multiple herbicides or combined tolerance to herbicides and resistance to insect pests. The introduction of the HT trait in these crops is mainly aimed at providing farmers with weed management options that allow for the control of a range of weeds whereby specific herbicides can be sprayed on the GM crop with minimal damage to the crop, whilst killing surrounding weeds.

2.3 There has been rapid adoption of HT GM crops by growers around the globe due to benefits that have been linked to the cultivation of these crops. Such include improved weed control, simplified management strategies such as changes in tillage practices and herbicide application, with benefits to the environment such as reduction in soil erosion and fossil fuel emissions, as well as reduced costs in weed control programmes. However, as with all new technologies, there are concerns linked to the potential environmental impacts that may result from the cultivation of the HT GM crop, taking into account the inserted genes, the modified crop itself, application of herbicides on these crops and other changes in management practices linked to the GM crop.

2.4 The release of HT GM crops into the environment in South Africa is thus a decision that follows the outcome of, among others, a rigorous science based environmental risk assessment (ERA) in accordance with the National Environmental Management Biodiversity Act (NEMBA), 2004 (No. 10 of 2004). Such an assessment seeks to identify aspects of the cultivation of the HT GM crop that may pose a risk to biodiversity and the environment and to evaluate the likelihood and consequences of adverse effects occurring. This includes, among others, identifying changes in the ability of the GM crop to transfer genetic material to other organisms, determining the genetic stability of the inserted sequences, changes in the ability of the crop to persist in the environment and surviving as a weed or to become invasive compared to the conventional crop, changes in agricultural practices, and potential for weed resistance development in the case of HT GM crops. While the use of herbicides is primarily regulated through the Fertilizers, Farm Feeds, Agricultural Remedies and Stock Remedies Act, 1947 (Act No. 36 of 1947), which includes a science based risk assessment for the safety of the herbicides on human health and the environment, the risk assessment of HT GM crops includes evaluation of overall environmental impact arising from expected changes in cultivation practices due to the use of the herbicides to which the GM crop is tolerant, in addition to evaluating the potential environmental impacts directly associated with the GM crop.

2.5 Part of the GMO regulatory process is to conduct monitoring which is aimed at either confirming that any assumption made in the ERA regarding the occurrence and impact of potential adverse effects of a GMO or its use are correct or to identify any unintended adverse effects of a GMO on the environment which were not anticipated in the ERA. Given the foregoing, there is a need to undertake a study to assess the potential environmental consequences of growing HT GM crops and the ecological effects of herbicide use associated with HT GM crops. Such research is important to increases our understanding of risks associated with HT GM crops and associated herbicides, and to allow for the evaluation of different risk management options to inform risk assessment procedures and to provide appropriate and sufficient support to decision making on HT GM crops and associated herbicide usage.

3. OBJECTIVES

This project is expected to achieve the following objectives:

3.1. To evaluate whether the adoption of HT crops has led to an increase or reduction in quantities and active ingredients of herbicide used.

3.2. To identify potential environmental impacts associated with cultivation of HT GM crops and herbicide (glyphosate and glufosinate-ammonium) use on ecological processes, trophic interactions and non-target organisms (NTOs);

3.3. To evaluate the potential environmental impacts of management practices and herbicide application regimes for HT GM crops as compared to GM crops without HT trait and conventional crops;
3.4. To provide policy recommendations to the Department to support decision making process for consideration when conducting environmental risk assessment for GM crops containing HT traits.

4. SCOPE AND EXTENT OF WORK

The following areas of work are the expected to be covered in this project:

4.1. Develop a project inception report which details the approach to be followed, budget and milestones.

4.2. Determine the proportion of South Africa’s maize, cotton and soybean hectares that is HT GM crops, including those with HT as a single trait and those with combined HT/IR traits.

4.3. Sample populations of pollinators in HT GM crop fields compared to fields of GM crops without the HT trait and those of conventional crops.

4.4. Assess inheritance and stability of the HT gene(s) over several generations in field conditions, to demonstrate whether there is consistent expression and stable incorporation of the transgene in the HT GM crops.

4.5. Determine whether there has been cases of gene flow from HT GM crops to other neighbouring related crops, establish the causes of the gene flow occurrence and determine if there are consequences to the environment as a result.

4.6. Evaluate the potential consequences arising from the use of glyphosate on ecological processes, trophic interactions and NTOs associated with the crop plant) as: (1) an active ingredient only, (2) when combined with other ingredients in a range of commercial products and (3) when applied in conjunction with multiple other herbicides, insecticides, and fungicides.

4.7. Evaluate whether adoption of HT crops has resulted in changes in herbicide use patterns (including frequency and volumes of glyphosate/glufosinate ammonium applied in HT fields as initially endorsed.

4.8. Determine changes in agricultural practices that may result from the planting of HT GM crops and determine if there has been changes in herbicide use patterns as result.

4.9. Assess the indirect ecological effects of management practices and herbicide application regimes for HT GM crops on ecological processes, trophic interactions and beneficial NTOs (coleopteran beetles, pollinators, and mycorrhizal fungi) compared with management practices applied in non-HT GM and conventional cropping systems.

4.10. Profile the spectrum of weeds found in HT GM crop fields (in comparison with weeds found in GM crops without the HT trait and conventional crops) and document weed species already resistant or have potential to develop resistance to glyphosate/glufosinate-ammonium, and determine occurrences of weed shifts.

4.11. Assess the socioeconomic implications of HT GM crop adoption by South African growers on pest management costs and volumes of glyphosate/glufosinate ammonium imported, and also establish whether there has been a replacement of some herbicide active ingredients by glyphosate/glufosinate ammonium.

4.12. Engage with relevant stakeholders on 4.1 to 4.11 above and develop stakeholder engagement reports.
4.13. Develop reports on the outcomes of 4.1 to 4.11 above.

5. EXPECTED DELIVERABLES / OUTCOMES

The following deliverables will be expected from the service provider for this project:

5.1. Stakeholder engagement reports.
5.2. Reports on the outcomes of 4.1 to 4.11.
5.3. Final report on the project with recommendations to inform decision making on HT GM crops and associated herbicides, including recommendations on future research projects, management suggestions, ERA procedures and monitoring for HT GM crops.

6. PERIOD / DURATION OF PROJECT / ASSIGNMENT

CERTIFICATE OF INDEPENDENT BID DETERMINATION

1 This Standard Bidding Document (SBD) must form part of all bids¹ invited.

2 Section 4 (1) (b) (iii) of the Competition Act No. 89 of 1998, as amended, prohibits an agreement between, or concerted practice by, firms, or a decision by an association of firms, if it is between parties in a horizontal relationship and if it involves collusive bidding (or bid rigging).² Collusive bidding is a pe se prohibition meaning that it cannot be justified under any grounds.

3 Treasury Regulation 16A9 prescribes that accounting officers and accounting authorities must take all reasonable steps to prevent abuse of the supply chain management system and authorizes accounting officers and accounting authorities to:

   a. disregard the bid of any bidder if that bidder, or any of its directors have abused the institution’s supply chain management system and or committed fraud or any other improper conduct in relation to such system.

   b. cancel a contract awarded to a supplier of goods and services if the supplier committed any corrupt or fraudulent act during the bidding process or the execution of that contract.

4 This SBD serves as a certificate of declaration that would be used by institutions to ensure that, when bids are considered, reasonable steps are taken to prevent any form of bid-rigging.

5 In order to give effect to the above, the attached Certificate of Bid Determination (SBD 9) must be completed and submitted with the bid:

² Bid rigging (or collusive bidding) occurs when businesses, that would otherwise be expected to compete, secretly conspire to raise prices or lower the quality of goods and / or services for purchasers who wish to acquire goods and / or services through a bidding process. Bid rigging is, therefore, an agreement between competitors not to compete.
